

Leave the Leaves!

Don't blow, rake or shred leaves this fall!

Leave nature's mulch to:

- Sustain birds
- Protect overwintering pollinators
- Insulate plant roots
- Build living soil

Rewild
Wild Seed
Project

A detailed illustration of a forest floor in autumn. The ground is covered with a thick layer of fallen leaves in various shades of orange, red, and brown. A small, dark mole is visible in the center, digging through the leaves. To the left, a red cardinal and a black and white chickadee are perched on the ground. To the right, a spotted frog is partially visible. In the background, there are several mushrooms, a spider web, and a small insect. The overall scene is a rich, textured representation of a natural ecosystem.
